► Sea lanes and pipelines : energy security
in Asia/ Bernard D Cole

Westport CT : Praeger, 2008
xiv, 262 p. : maps.

This book is concerned with the military aspects of energy security in maritime Asia and is written from a naval perspective. Asia includes the second and third largest energy consumers as well as many of the largest producers but sources and markets are far apart and the vast majority of oil and gas is transported by sea. First the book considers the processes of energy extraction and the threats to SLOCs (sea lines of communication) including sovereignty disputes, then comments on classical maritime theories and the maritime strategy of various Asian states, then assesses regional naval powers (NB data on Brunei is incorrect); the next chapter covers the role of multilateral organisations and arrangements including the UN, APEC, ASEAN, ARF, CSCAP, and the PSI; the conclusion addresses possible future naval developments in the light of energy demand.

► Terrorism : the new world disorder/ Nicholas Fotion, Boris Kashnikov and Joanne K Lekea

London : Continuum, 2008
xix, 187 p.

Three philosophers consider the ethical and moral aspects of terrorism in two different categories: suicide terrorism, and attacks in which the perpetrators intend to survive. Describes examples of terror attacks during the last century ranging from revolutionary terrorism in Russia, the area bombing of Germany in the Second World War, Chechen terrorism, and the Iraq War of 2003. Considers ethical arguments for and against terrorism and concludes with some brief comments on military and non-military ideas about how to respond to terrorism.

► The black swan : the impact of the highly improbable/ Nassim Nicholas Taleb

New York : Random House, 2007
xxviii, 366 p.

Black Swans are events that lie outside normal expectations that have great impact, and despite being entirely unpredictable are subsequently subjected to human efforts to explain them and thus make them predictable. The book is an exploration of the concept of uncertainty and the problems inherent in predicting the future.

► The coming of the Third Reich : a history/ Richard J Evans.

New York : Penguin, 2005
xxxiv, 622 p.

First part of Professor Richard Evans huge three volume history of the rise and fall of the Nazis. This volume considers how political, economic, and military events in the nineteenth century and the early decades of the twentieth enabled Hitler and his Nazis to take over Germany and create the Third Reich.

► The European Union : a very short introduction / John Pinder and Simon Usherwood

► The geography of thought : how Asians and Westerners think differently and why/ Richard E Nisbett

New York : Free Press, 2004
xxiii, 263 p.

There are distinct differences in Western and eastern thought process and perceptions. This book considers why this should be, tracing the development of ideas about cognition over three thousand years of human history. Argues that these differences are deeply rooted but that there are indications of some degree of convergence between the two at the present time.

► The leadership pipeline : how to build the leadership-powered company / Ram Charan, Stephen Drotter, James Noel

San Francisco : Jossey Bass, 2001 xx, 248 p.

Although the subtitle of this book refers specifically to companies the concepts contained in it apply equally well to other forms of organization. The emphasis is on ensuring a flow of candidates for senior positions by identifying a six stage process (described as critical leadership passages) which people go through as their careers progress. One of the underlying principles is the need for a change of perception of what is important to the organisation at different levels of seniority. Based in part on experiences at General Electric and other large corporations in the USA.

► The return of history and the end of dreams/ Robert kagan

New York : Alfred Knopf, 2008
115 p.

Charts the rise and fall of the brief period of euphoria in international relations that followed the end of the Cold War (characterised in Francis Fukuyama's book 'the end of history'), and takes a sober look at the shaping of great power relations in the early years of the 21st century.

► The starfish and the spider : the unstoppable power of leaderless organizations/ ri Brafman and Rod A Beckstrom

New York : Portfolio, 2006
230 p.

Develops the idea that organisations are of two types: either "spiders" hierarchical and rigid with top down management, or "starfish" flat and decentralised with peer-to-peer relationships. Argues that starfish organisations that lack traditional hierarchies and leadership structures are increasingly important in the modern internet based world. Presents a variety of examples in support of the idea and identifies 10 rules which apply to the new style leaderless organization.

► The Third Reich at war : how the Nazi's led Germany from conquest to disaster/ Richard J Evans

London : Allen Lane, 2008
xvii, 926 p.

Concluding volume of Professor Evans exceptional social history of the rise and fall of the Third Reich. This volume covers the period of the Second World War and in particular the aspects of "conquest, subjugation and genocide". The Nazis were obsessed with racial purity and considerable efforts and resources were used to deal with (i.e. exterminate) millions of Slavs, Jews, gypsies, mentally ill, physically handicapped, homosexuals, Jehovah's Witnesses, and criminals. Meanwhile the German people had been taught to expect the state to provide for all their needs including protection from enemies - when, as during the huge bombing raids on German cities, the system failed resentment was often aimed at the Nazis rather than the attacking forces. Nazism thus contained the seeds of its own destruction. The book begins with the invasion of Poland and ends with the total collapse of Germany.

► The Third Reich in power/ Richard J Evans

New York ; London : Penguin, 2005
xvii, 941 p.

Second volume (of three) of Professor Evans comprehensive and highly readable study of the rise and fall of the Nazis. This volume runs from the Nazis seizure of power in early 1933 to the brink of war in 1939. Evans draws on a vast array of original documents from personal diaries to state papers.

► The wisdom of crowds/ James Surowiechi

New York : Doubleday, 2004
xxi, 306 p.

An assessment of the apparently counterintuitive proposition that collective intelligence is more likely to produce right answers than clever or intelligent individuals. The book makes clear that it is not an argument against expertise but that expertise is just one among many factors. Discusses how organizations could benefit from corporate wisdom (though if all organizations applied the concepts then the advantage might prove elusive). This edition includes a new afterword by the author.

► Understanding and managing organizational culture / Orla O'Donnell and Richard Boyle

Dublin, Ireland : Institute of Public Administration, 2008
xiii, 95 p.

This study originating from Ireland considers what is meant by organisational culture in the public sector, why it is important to public service managers, what managers can do to influence culture, and the close relationship between culture and leadership. Looks at international experience in both public and private sectors, and identifies six key issues that must be addressed to create a more developmental and performance oriented culture.
